Proceeding

My mother had 8 children, my aunt had 10 and the other aunt had 12... My neighbor had 18 children... and that was the reality in the 60's when there was no TV... and the cost to go to the movie or other form of entertainment seemed to be quite expensive... and there was no birth control or alternative prevention for women reproduction approach... In Asia, there was a greeting in the new year "hope that you have a boy in the beginning of the year, and the girl by the end..." The government did have a national campaign for population control and the church did promote the notion of doing something else besides sex... But all were failed, that human sexual drive took over... The population growth exploded and the problem of population control has increased in Asia.

Today, thanks to the availability of the television and other forms of entertainment that men and women can enjoy together besides sex, the matter of having too much babies can be controlled reasonable ok... because people can do something else besides thinking about sex when they are getting together... Instead of praying, as the church encouraged the people to do when they get together, to prevent the people to have sex and as the result to have baby; people in the 21st century will have many options to keep their minds off and away from the sex subjects like enjoying the TV shows for the women or sport programs for men... In China, there was a commercial on TV promoted by the government with the slogan watching TV and not having babies... In Africa, there was a commercial with the slogan watch TV and not having sex at night.

Specially thanks to the invention of the internet that connects the world to one another, that the people can engage to communicate to each other in the form of chatting which will create a new form of relationship and release the stress... In addition to be another form of entertainment; and a good one to that will combine all forms of audio and visual communication and entertainment platforms... It is the source of education and information that people can rely on to get the answers for their concerns; specially among the women, in the matter of reproductive issues and other sexual desires matters... and I'm not kidding, that pornography availability on the internet is another factor that assist to release the people sexual drive, thus, contribute to the population control issue... Finally, the aggressive campaign on population control by the government with the birth control pills and other forms of birth control approaches that will help the women to deal with the issues more reasonable and effectively... It is not in the matter of having a baby, but more importantly how to raise a baby properly, but most importantly how to educate a child to become a real productive human being and if he/she can live his/her lives in the fullest.
